RETIRED—Mrs. Mary Dunnigan, who retired January 28 from her work at Eno Plant, Hillsboro, is shown with some of her co-workers after they presented her with a gift. Mrs. Dunnigan, who had been at Eno for 46 years, recalls that when she came to the plant in 1908, it consisted of Carding and Spinning Departments only. Since that time, she has observed the expansion of the mill and the community. Although she has no definite plans for the future, Mrs. Dunnigan says that she hopes to get a lot of rest and to visit with friends and relatives.

Cone Mills Inc. Increases Twill Price

Cone Mills Inc. names new higher firm prices on twills and drills as follows: Captain 41/42" 8 1/2 oz. twill from 54 1/2 to 56 cents per yard. Corporal 41" 7 3/4 to 7 1/2 oz. twill from 49 to 51 cents. Militia 41" 6 oz. shirting twill, from 45 to 46 cents. Phoenix 36" drill from 43 1/2 to 44 cents. These prices are based on basic army tan color, Cone Mills color 99. The new prices cover primarily the work clothing twills and drills although some sportswear colors are included in the new basis.

At the old basis prices were below cost. The increase in price of raw cotton has made the advances absolutely necessary and even at the new prices, the mills are just about breaking even. Deliveries at the new basis are through June.

Benefit Sale

Nine Local People Work On Heart Fund

During the four hours in which residents of this community, Cone Mills communities, Greensboro, and surrounding areas will "Welcome Your Heart Fund Volunteer on Heart Sunday, February 14" many hundreds of doorbells will be rung and many hundreds of contributions will be made to the 1954 Heart Fund. Volunteer workers in Cone Mills Area are certain the effect will go forward with clock-like precision. This will be the result of much in the way of advance planning by a great many people... planning in which every detail has been regarded as being of utmost importance.

With Heart Sunday only a few days off, the volunteer workers have, final instructions and are all ready to begin making their rounds. All this has been prefaced by long hours of behind-the-scenes work. First, there was a matter of selecting people to fill key chairmanships. This was done weeks ago, with key posts going to: Mrs. John W. Marshall, Mrs. Ray L. Thomas, Mrs. Johnny W. Sparks, Mrs. Claude Culbreth, Mrs. Horace Pennington, Mrs. Annie M. Norman, Mrs. William B. Burke, Mrs. J. Frank Starling, Mrs. Robert E. Beal.

Then came the recruiting of volunteers and the assignment of territories so that there will be no over-lapping of effort next Sunday afternoon, February 14. This involved recruiting 136 volunteer workers and six more are needed. Anyone wishing to help may call Mrs. Graves at 4-3945 for assignment. Cone Mills areas were divided into 3 census tracts with workers for each. Workers will call on neighbors in their own block.

While volunteers were being enlisted, work on another and equally important detail was progressing... the production and assembly of kits for volunteer workers. Each kit includes list of homes each worker will call on; identification tag; heart sunday envelopes; fact sheet on heart disease; envelope to leave if persons not at home. They will be mailed to volunteer workers by Thursday.

Then elaborate plans have been made for the pick-up of filled kits after 6:00 p.m. Sunday, February 14 and their transfer to Heart Fund Headquarters, 107 West Gaston Street. Captains will collect kits and turn them in.

And finally preparations have been made for the opening of the envelopes the sorting and counting of contributions, and even the examination of discarded envelopes to make certain no money will be thrown away.

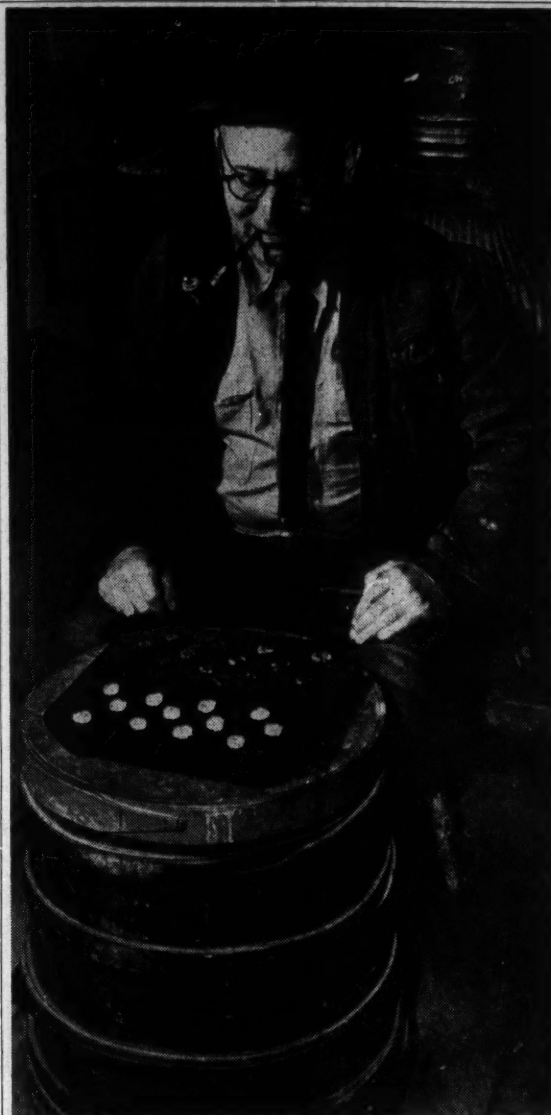

Insofar as was possible, volunteers have been assigned solicitation areas in their neighborhood, each being requested to cover from 12 to 15 homes between the hours of 2:00 and 6:00 p.m.

"This will not be a high pressure campaign," officials said, "Each family is aware of the importance of the Heart Fund, and our hope is that each will contribute in accordance with its ability."

"In line with concept, the Heart Sunday volunteer is not expected to make an elaborate sales talk in behalf of the Heart Fund, but instead merely to afford the neighbors on her solicitation list an opportunity to contribute."

There are a limited number of tickets on sale, so secure yours early.

Every Move Counts....

The game of checkers is more than just a pastime. It is a test of orderly thinking, foresight and planning. To win at checkers, one must be able to advance or attack with courage while carefully protecting the gains already earned. The game has not changed since its "country store" days when sections of corn cobs were the checkers and almost any improvised piece of wood became the board.

Problems similar in principle to checkers constantly face those who run a successful business. It can't remain successful without constantly advancing. Such advances are in the form of developing new markets and products; improving quality and delivery and providing better tools and equipment. Failure to make these moves allows competitors to win out or at least gain a stalemate where no one wins.

Employees of a successful business can help keep it so through an attitude of loyalty, cooperation and confidence. Such an attitude permits management to make its moves with assurance... with full faith that all will help to guard the gains of the past and advance to greater security and success for all.

French Skill Adds Color To Handwoven Kerchiefs

PARIS—There are few details of feminine dress—and I say purposely dress because a handkerchief today is far more than a merely practical accessory—which are more painstakingly produced and styled than the wisps of cambric without which no woman is perfectly equipped for any occasion.

The original word cambric, which in the English language describes the fabric used for the most mundane and utilitarian type of kerchief, originally took its name from the town of Cambrai in northeastern France where the production of handkerchiefs has occupied the population of the town and the surrounding villages for many generations.

Artisans Persist

The very first handkerchiefs woven there were produced from hand-spun yarns, woven on hand looms. In sharp contrast with the modern development of many other fashion industries the art of hand, or artisan workmanship still operates throughout this area.

The days of hand spinning have passed in favor of increasingly finer yarns which can be machine-spun, but any manufacturer of fine handkerchiefs in the district will tell you that no mechanical loom has yet been produced which will handle economically the number of colors the handweaver blends into his or her finest work. Nor is this produced by a machine as faultlessly as it is by the artisan-craftsman who watches every thread as his, or her, shuttle flies back and forth on looms which have been in the same family for generations.

One misgiving is felt in the area of Cambrai. One sees the lack of young people taking up the craft of hand weaving, and wonders how it will survive.

The artisan workers of today are all well on in years, some of them over 80 years of age. Thus the questions arise—is this the last chapter for the handwoven handkerchief? Will the woman of fashion some 20 years hence have to be satisfied with the mechanically-woven article?

Ideals Retained

However, perhaps even if she does, she will not be dissatisfied with its appearance, since Cambrai is endeavoring to keep its industry small and exclusive. It follows Paris fashion closely and picks out the right colors as faithfully as do the designers of any other choice accessories.

Firms such as that of G. & P. Herbin, for instance, have a resident Paris stylist who views the leading Paris couturier collections of Christian Dior, Jacques Fath, Pierre Balmain and others and it is her duty to keep them advised as to the newest trends in colors since today the colored handkerchief is all the rage.

Time was when all handkerchiefs were pristine white, plain or laced, occasionally embroidered. But today modern development in color-fast dyeing has entirely altered the production of the handkerchief industry.

In sharp contrast to the ancient methods of weaving and the purposefully small and individual character given to the workshops in which mechanical looms were grouped, is the huge dyeing and finishing plant of the Blanchisserie et Teinturerie de Cambrai which serves the entire Cambrai district. Here is industry on a giant scale, washing, mercerizing, dyeing, and finishing the yards of cambric, or fine lawn, which return again to the artisan craftsman or woman for cutting-up and hemming. Here again hand workmanship is at a premium and the finest handkerchiefs are hand hemmed before deft fingers pack them into dainty boxes for dispatch to customers in Paris, and other world capitals.

Cotton and Color

It is with the advent of the colored handkerchief that cotton has taken such a prominent position in the field of handkerchief production. No other textile fiber can offer such clear vivid colors, and a journey through any one of the Cambrai factories at the moment is a colorful expedition, to say the least. Rainbow shades are to the fore in checked weaves, and the ultra smart alliance of black and brown, is much in evidence.

Hand-weavers handle as many as 15 shades or more in their finest efforts. Eight and ten colors are not unusual in some of the finer mechanically woven articles. Well might the hand weaver be expected

YARN—Here yarn already dyed for weaving into bright scarf squares is viewed by tourists in the Cambrai region of France.

WEAVING—Here a veteran skilled hand loom weaver of handkerchiefs in the Cambrai region of France is shown at his work. Working far more faultlessly than the machine, the artisan craftsman watches every thread as his shuttle flies back and forth on looms which have been in the same family for generations. Today there is a lack of young people taking up the craft of hand weaving in France, and since all present weavers are in their late years, one wonders if it will become a lost art.

FINISHING—In the finishing room of the handkerchief plant, cotton handkerchiefs are handled in hundreds of yards at a time. (Photos used with permission of Jane Barry and French Cotton Manufacturers Syndicate.)

'Sordid Tales From California'

The sordid tales from California with a son of one of America's most famous families as a chief character are nothing short of disgusting.

Mr. Average Person, who normally is inclined to relish choice bits of scandal, finds the publicity about James Roosevelt not too palatable.

Even those who were ever ready to attack the policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt during his sensational administration no doubt join partisans in the New Deal camp in expressing regret over the either disgraceful or stupid behavior of the son.

Were it not for the fact that Jimmy has for many years tried to utilize the fame and name of his family for personal gain and to promote his own political ambitions, we might be more tolerant toward him at this time. Maybe he now realizes that his extravagant use of the prestige of the Roosevelt name carries with it certain obligations and responsibilities, and that a repudiation of them can only besmirch that name.

Evidently, Jimmy's professed consideration for his father as the reason for signing a letter which, innocently or not, incriminates him is either a sham or an extreme case of stupidity.

The record of Franklin D. Roosevelt should not be made to suffer because of the behavior of his son. On the other hand, the American public should not for long permit even a Roosevelt to flaunt his own code of ethics and rules of behavior and not be held accountable.

Co-Ed Club Makes Club Room Draperies

Proximity Co-Eds held their regular weekly meeting Thursday night February 4 at 7:30 at the Proximity "Y." The main event of the evening was putting the finishing touches on the pretty red draperies and hanging them in the Club room. Boys and girls both joined together to see the job finished, and they do look nice. After the work was over cokes and popcorn were enjoyed by all.

Plans were discussed for the election of officers at the next meeting, February 11, after which they will dismiss for an hour of bowling. Plans are also being made for the club to go skating February 19.

Virginia McKinney, secretary of the club was in St. Leo's hospital at the time of the meeting and the entire club went by to say "Hello" for a few minutes.

If you are between the ages of 16-19 and would like to be a member of this club, contact Mrs. Frances Funderburk or Wayne Cates.

FRENCH SKILL ADDS

to find the handling of so many colors a tiring and over-exacting occupation. Certainly it takes longer to produce the same amount of yardage than it does to weave a more simple design in fewer shades, but the weavers say that it is less monotonous and less tiring, while it is also better paid, since artisan workmanship, carried out in the weavers' own homes, is paid by production and not by hours of work.

In recent years the demand for novelty handkerchiefs has increased greatly in Paris and especially at the Christmas season, during which sales rise steeply. Leading shops make a big display of such merchandise for girls which are sufficiently varied in price to appeal to all purses, from the rare lace-trimmed article, which is really a collector's piece, to the simple rolled-hemmed kerchief of intermediary size, which it is now fashionable to wear knotted round the neck as an alternative to a piece of jewelry with a simple dress or sports outfit.

Variety General

There are larger cotton scarves also, woven in a host of brilliant colors, washable, fade-proof and for such reasons much prized by women who seek practical presents for friends at home and abroad. Few gifts can be packed and displayed by post more easily than the handkerchief or small kerchief with the result that many Paris stores offer special envelopes with handkerchiefs purchased at the gift season.

There is novelty also at this time of the year in diaphanous white handkerchiefs woven with cut-threads that produce a design or motif in nontransparent texture. It may be mere monogram or a floral patterned border, but for the gift season these patterned handkerchiefs carry messages of greeting when held up to the light. "Happy Christmas" or "Happy New Year" say some of those shown in the shops today.

Printed cotton handkerchiefs are another novelty at the moment, many of them being perfect souvenirs of a visit to Paris. Some 300 such souvenir handkerchiefs were presented by the Grands Magasins du Printemps to U. S. Army wives when his leading Paris store showed its collection of winter coats and dresses at SHAPE headquarters in Fontainebleau recently.

There is a romantic quality about the handkerchief which historians of feminine wearing apparel have frequently likened to that of the fan. In a period when the latter has fallen into disuse, it is pleasant to feel that the handkerchief remains something more than its utilitarian purpose in the smart woman's wardrobe.

N. C. Symphony Drive Over Feb. 23

Annual drive for memberships of the local branch of the North Carolina Symphony Society, will begin here on February 9 and will run through Tuesday, February 23, chairman of the drive, Kenneth Bevan, president, said. Kick-off meeting was in the form of a musicale and tea for committee workers at the home of Mrs. M. O. Board, assistant membership chairman.

The nationally-known symphony, conducted by Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, will offer five concerts here May 3, 6 and 7, during its 1953-54 season: two evening concerts for adults, and three free matinees for school children of the city and county, Negro and white.

Last year, the orchestra traveled 10,000 miles and played five music for more than 140,000 Tar Heel school youngsters.

On their eighth annual tour the professional musicians played 52 evening (adult) concerts; and performed for 71 children's audiences. Out of state programs were played in South Carolina, West Virginia, Alabama and Tennessee.

The concerts in Greensboro will be held at A. & T.'s Harrison Auditorium and Woman's College's Aycock Auditorium.

Heart Sunday

Welcome Your Heart Fund Volunteer on Heart Sunday, February 14.

This is something more than a catch-phrase. The public-spirited citizens who will make a house-to-house canvass next Sunday in behalf of the 1954 Heart Fund deserve not only the warmest of welcomes in the homes they visit, but also a full measure of acclaim for their selfless expenditure of time and effort in the furtherance of a worthy cause.

Heart Sunday brings to everybody's attention, at one time, the need to combat diseases of the heart and circulation. By the same token, it gives the entire community a chance to participate.

Mechanics of the plan are simple: The volunteer merely rings the doorbell, greets her neighbor and presents a Heart Sunday envelope in which the donor may inclose a contribution. The contributor is to seal the envelope, and the volunteer is to leave a signed thank-you acknowledgement. It is as simple as that.

Great and laudable are the objectives of the Heart Fund; first and foremost, through research it seeks to find the causes and new methods of prevention and treatment of diseases of the heart and circulation which are responsible for 771,000 deaths yearly. Beyond that, the Heart Fund makes possible vitally needed professional and public education and community heart programs.

So again we say: "Welcome Your Heart Sunday Volunteer." And to this we add: "Help Your Heart Fund — Help Your Heart."

Red Cross Set For 1954 Campaign

A minimum goal of $91,300.00 has been set for the 1954 Members and Funds Campaign, American Red Cross, it was announced by George W. Bradham, chairman of the Greensboro Chapter. The Annual Fund Appeal, source of funds for local and national support of Red Cross services will get under way in Greensboro and Guilford county March 1, under the general Chairmanship of J. M. Fullton.

Bradham stated that the local Chapter's budget was set by the Chapter's Executive Committee after careful study, was approved by the board of Directors, then submitted to Southeastern Area, American National Red Cross for final approval.

Of the total goal, $59,435.00 is for financing all services of the local Chapter. The largest single item continues to be the Home Service Department, which is responsible for services to members of the Armed Forces and their families and veterans and their dependants. The budget for this service is $18,520.00.

The second largest item is $12,500.00 for the Civilian Blood Program in this community, through which blood is furnished to all patients in local hospitals, without charge for the product itself.

Safety Services, through which First Aid, Swimming, Life Saving and boating training is given, is budgeted at $5,240.00, while Nursing Services, which includes educational classes in Home Care of the Sick and Mother and Baby Care is budgeted at $4,525.00.

These four services account for two-thirds of the local budget, with the other one-third being allocated to Junior Red Cross, Production materials, Camp and Hospital services, Disaster Committees, Public Information and Fund Campaign, insurance, administrative and general operating expenses.

For the support of essential Red Cross services financed through the national organization, the goal includes $31,865.00. Bradham pointed out that a volunteer Board of Governors sets the national budget, and that the national portion is arrived at on a fair share formula: also that every Chapter benefits very directly from the services financed on the national level.

The largest items in the national budget are Services to the Armed Forces, the Blood Program and Disaster Relief. Through the National Red Cross Staff is provided at military installations and hospitals in this country and overseas, with whom the local Chapter works in solving problems arising with local men in service.

The national organization finances a part of the Blood Program to help make it possible in local communities, and finances major disaster relief operations. The goal for the American National Red
